

Call for Presentations for the 35th Annual Conference of the American Assembly for Men in Nursing September 23 -25, 2010 at Duke University, Durham, North Carolina

Conference Theme: Working for the Health of Our Nation and the World: Men in Nursing

The American Assembly for Men in Nursing is currently accepting submissions for oral and poster presentations as well as for panel or roundtable discussions for its annual conference, hosted by the Duke University School of Nursing. AAMN is seeking submissions from nurses and members of other disciplines to present in Durham, North Carolina.

Submissions should address one or more of the following conference objectives:

1. Explore strategies associated with successful recruitment and retention of men in the nursing profession.
2. Analyze the importance of the roles of nursing educators and health care partners in creating diversification within the nursing profession.
3. Characterize the historical and present-day influences of the military on nursing and health care.
4. Create goals for improving men's health and minimizing health care disparities, while understanding how the AAMN contributes to those goals.
5. Critique research findings focusing on men in nursing, and men's health issues, to predict future directions.
6. Examine the health care needs of a global society.
7. Identify opportunities to increase cultural diversity in the healthcare workforce.
